Johnstone Triangle Norman Reid, 2021-01-18 Chemistry is often seen as a difficult subject to understand This book focusses on the triangle model that Alex H Johnstone developed in the early 1980s Originally conceived in the context of making chemistry more accessible to a wider range of learners the model has been applied in almost every area of education in chemistry at all stages of learning In looking at why chemistry is difficult there are two central questions Firstly does the problem relate to the nature of chemistry and secondly does it relate to the way humans gain understanding Both were found to be important and the answers to the two questions were found to be connected The triangle model arose from sustained research into human learning The central finding from research is the critical role of working memory and the model rationalises so much evidence from chemistry education research as well as the repeated experiences of teachers of chemistry at all levels In order to understand chemistry it is essential to develop sound mental models of molecular reality It generates major implications for the way a chemistry curriculum should be constructed and the processes of teaching and learning in chemistry when the goal is focussed on understanding the key ideas Some of these implications are developed and pointers offered to more successful ways forward The power of the Johnstone Triangle lies in the way it offers clear directions for all involved in chemistry education It is hoped that this book will prove helpful to all involved in sharing the exciting story of the way humans have come to understand the molecular world one of the great examples of great human endeavour

Veterans and Agent Orange Institute of Medicine, Board on the Health of Select Populations, Committee to Review the Health Effects in Vietnam Veterans of Exposure to Herbicides (Ninth Biennial Update), 2014-03-06 From 1962 to 1971 the US military sprayed herbicides over Vietnam to strip the thick jungle canopy that could conceal opposition forces to destroy crops that those forces might depend on and to clear tall grasses and bushes from the perimeters of US base camps and outlying fire support bases Mixtures of 2,4-dichlorophenoxyacetic acid (2,4-D) and 2,4,5-trichlorophenoxyacetic acid (2,4,5-T) picloram and cacodylic acid made up the bulk of the herbicides sprayed The main chemical mixture sprayed was Agent Orange a 50:50 mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T At the time of the spraying 2,3,7,8-tetrachlorodibenzo-p-dioxin (TCDD) the most toxic form of dioxin was an unintended contaminant generated during the production of 2,4,5-T and so was present in Agent Orange and some other formulations sprayed in Vietnam Because of complaints from returning Vietnam veterans about their own health and that of their children combined with emerging toxicologic evidence of adverse effects of phenoxy herbicides and TCDD the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) was asked to perform a comprehensive evaluation of scientific and medical information regarding the health effects of exposure to Agent Orange other herbicides used in Vietnam and the various components of those herbicides including TCDD Updated evaluations are conducted every two years to review newly available literature and draw conclusions from the overall evidence Veterans and Agent Orange Update 2012 reviews peer reviewed scientific reports concerning associations between health outcomes and exposure to TCDD and other chemicals in the herbicides used in Vietnam that were published in October 2010 September 2012 and integrates this information with the previously established evidence database This report considers whether a statistical association with herbicide exposure exists taking into account the strength of the scientific evidence and the appropriateness of the statistical and epidemiological methods used to detect the association the increased risk of disease among those exposed to herbicides during service in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era and whether there exists a plausible biological mechanism or other evidence of a causal relationship between herbicide exposure and the disease

Social Behaviour Tamás Székely, Allen J. Moore, Jan Komdeur, 2010-11-18. Humans live in large and extensive societies and spend much of their time interacting socially. Likewise, most other animals also interact socially. Social behaviour is of constant fascination to biologists and psychologists of many disciplines, from behavioural ecology to comparative biology and sociobiology. The two major approaches used to study social behaviour involve either the mechanism of behaviour, where it has come from and how it has evolved, or the function of the behaviour studied. With guest articles from leaders in the field, theoretical foundations along with recent advances are presented to give a truly multidisciplinary overview of social behaviour for advanced undergraduate and graduate students. Topics include aggression, communication, group living, sexual behaviour and co-operative breeding. With examples ranging from bacteria to social mammals and humans, a variety of research tools are used, including candidate gene approaches, quantitative genetics, neuro-endocrine studies, cost-benefit and phylogenetic analyses and evolutionary game theory.
