Abstract — This paper reports on a study of the experiences of people who have been involved in a violent crime. The study was conducted in a hospital setting and involved a sample of 100 people who had been involved in a violent crime. The study found that people who have been involved in a violent crime experience a range of psychological and physical symptoms, including post-traumatic stress disorder, depression, anxiety, and physical injury. The study also found that people who have been involved in a violent crime often experience social isolation and a loss of support from family and friends. The study suggests that people who have been involved in a violent crime need access to a range of support services, including psychological support, medical support, and social support.
