

AP English Language & Composition Syllabus

Course Description

This Advanced Placement Language and Composition course is designed to be a college level course. It will provide you with the intellectual challenges and workload consistent with a typical undergraduate university English Composition course. There will be lots of required reading to include non-fiction, novels, short stories, and poems followed by an equal amount of writing in the form of short journal responses, explication, analysis, research, and compare and contrast essays, as well as timed AP response questions. We will spend parts of everyday practicing and honing our critical reading and writing skills, so your preparedness and attention to the reading schedule is a must. You will be required to read regularly outside of class and to report on said readings twice a semester in a modified book report/analysis. The purpose behind these readings is to broaden your reading and to improve your fluency. You will be asked to keep an English Portfolio in a three-ring binder for Notes, Journal Entries, Graded Papers, Handouts, as well as a section titled Miscellaneous.

Reading

The most important requirement for this course is that students read every assignment - read it with care and on time. Students not used to such language courses will need to plan time in their schedule for more reading than most courses require. Poetry, though usually not long, is dense and, at times, complicated and should always be read at least twice. Longer non-fiction assignments and novels in particular require more planning.

Writing

While reading is an absolute must in preparation for this course, the writing you complete during this course will be the primary basis for your grade and your preparation for the AP Exam. Each student will write numerous critical essays to include explication, analysis, research, and compare and contrast essays, as well as timed AP response questions. Your papers will be examined for effective word choice, inventive sentence structure, effective overall organization, clear emphasis and, above all, excellence of argument, including exhaustive supportive evidence (i.e. quotations) and clear, persuasive, elegant connection of this evidence to your overall argument.

The Advanced Placement Examination

The culmination of English IV, AP, is the Advanced Placement Examination, given nationally each year in May. By scoring a 3 or higher, a student can gain advanced placement standing in college or possibly earn college credit. There are two basic methods by which this can be accomplished. The first is to read all daily assignments carefully and conscientiously. By doing so, the student builds those skills expected of Advance Placement students. The second is to become familiar with the format and types
