Making a Grade James Elwick,2021-03-01 Starting in the 1850s achievement tests became standardized in the British Isles and were administered on an industrial scale By the end of the century more than two million people had written mass exams particularly in science technology and mathematics Some candidates responded to this standardization by cramming or cheating others embraced the hope that such tests rewarded not only knowledge but also merit Written with humour Making a Grade looks at how standardized testing practices quietly appeared and then spread worldwide This book situates mass exams marks and credentials in an emerging paper based meritocracy arguing that such exams often first appeared as cameras to neutrally record achievement and then became engines to change education as people tailored their behaviour to fit these tests Taking the perspectives of both examiners and examinees Making a Grade claims that our own culture s desire for accountability through objective testing has a long history Mining and Scientific Press and Pacific Electrical Review ,1880 The Intelligence ,1904 High-School Biology Today and Tomorrow National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Commission on Life Sciences,Committee on High-School Biology Education,1989-02-01 Biology is where many of science s most exciting and relevant advances are taking place Yet many students leave school without having learned basic biology principles and few are excited enough to continue in the sciences Why is biology education failing How can reform be accomplished This book presents information and expert views from curriculum developers teachers and others offering suggestions about major issues in biology education what should we teach in biology and how should it be taught How can we measure results How should teachers be educated and certified What obstacles are blocking reform
