

Chapter 1

In-Chapter Questions:

Apply Your Knowledge

1. Why do you think studying geography is critical in today's world?

In an increasingly interconnected world characterized by instant global communications, rapidly changing international relationships, and wide-scale environmental degradation, geography – with its interdisciplinary approach to physical and human systems – helps us to better understand the fluid nature of the world in which we live.

Through the study of the world's diverse inhabitants and places, we gain a sense of the uniqueness, influence, and interdependence of place. This gives us:

- Insight into the complexity of ongoing and emerging conflicts and challenges, which allows us to develop informed opinions and make responsible decisions about current events;
- An appreciation for diversity that can help us to overcome closed-mindedness, discrimination, and prejudice, and facilitate greater respect and cooperation in local, national, and international interactions;
- An understanding of the ways in which our own lives are connected to the lives of distant others, and the material consequences of these relationships;
- A better grasp of the Earth's physical systems and how they impact, and are in turn impacted by, human activity.

These insights stimulate our curiosity about the world around us, and encourage us to consider ourselves as part of a global citizenry with a responsibility to engage more meaningfully with pressing environmental and social issues.

2. List three reasons why a corporate employer would feel it is important for prospective employees to have some knowledge of geography.

Knowledge of geography can be attractive to employers for a number of reasons, including the following:

- Employees with a background in geography bring a holistic perspective to problem solving. They consider the social, economic, political, and environmental dimensions of an issue, and can deliver sophisticated analyses of complex problems.
- Geography fosters a spatial perspective that can help employees identify viable commercial opportunities (such as market areas or development sites) for their employers.
- Geographers are often well-versed in mapping and spatial technologies, which have come to play an important role in many corporate sectors.
- Commercial development must often be preceded by environmental assessment. Geographers who understand the interplay of physical and human systems are well-suited to undertake such assessments.
