Readers, Reading and Reception of Translated Fiction in Chinese Leo Tak-hung Chan,2014-04-08 Translated fiction has largely been under theorized if not altogether ignored in literary studies Though widely consumed translated novels are still considered secondary versions of foreign masterpieces Readers Reading and Reception of Translated Fiction in Chinese recognizes that translated novels are distinct from non translated novels just as they are distinct from the originals from which they are derived but they are neither secondary nor inferior They provide different models of reality they are split apart by two languages two cultures and two literary systems and they are characterized by cultural hybridity double voicing and multiple intertextualities With the continued popularity of translated fiction questions related to its reading and reception take on increasing significance Chan draws on insights from textual and narratological studies to unravel the processes through which readers interact with translated fiction Moving from individual readings to collective reception he considers how lay Chinese readers as a community received translated British fiction at specific historical moments during the late twentieth and early twenty first centuries Case studies discussed include translations of stream of consciousness novels fantasy fiction and postmodern works In addition to lay readers two further kinds of reader with bilingual facility are examined the way critics and historians approach translated fiction is investigated from structuralist and poststructuralist perspectives A range of novels by well known British authors constitute the core of the study including novels by Oscar Wilde James Joyce D H Lawrence Virginia Woolf John Fowles Helen Fielding and J K Rowling Catalogue New York University,1912 New York University Catalogue New York University,University of the City of New York,1912 Reading List on Florence Everett Robbins Perry,1912 Teaching Reading to English Language Learners Thomas S.
