

GUIDELINES FOR OUTLINING THE RESEARCH PAPER

Advanced Composition (E157) 2008-2009

Ms. Lawrence

Your paper will have five parts to it, so plan your research accordingly. Look at suggested lengths of sections and build a paper of about 5 pages, dealing with a topic of social importance. We will work on creating your thesis statement.

I. Introduction (1 paragraph)

A. Motivator – This is your opportunity to capture the reader's attention. You want to convince your reader that you have something worthwhile to say, that you are intelligent and thoughtful, and that your paper will be interesting and well-written. Suggestions include using: a startling quotation or statement followed by a couple sentences of commentary; a rhetorical question for which you suggest an answer; or another device (e.g. an anecdote) that allows you to show the tone and diction of what is to come in your paper. Include any necessary transitions to your thesis statement. (3 to 5 sentences)

B. Thesis statement and blueprint – This is a formal statement of the limited subject and precise opinion you intend to discuss as well as the blueprint for it. (1 to 2 sentences) End your introduction with this material so your reader has a clear idea of what you are pursuing.

II. Historical context of your topic (1 – 1 1/2 pages total)

A. Your topic ten, twenty-five or fifty years ago – Discuss an early history of your topic as a baseline for arguing your position. It will put your topic in context for your reader. Some points to consider: identifying individuals who were involved with your topic; presenting examples of legislation or events that impacted your topic; giving any statistics that enhance understanding of your topic; and discussing how your topic's profile or lack of it influenced society at that time. (1/2-1 page)

B. Your topic in the late twentieth/early twenty-first century – Consider the same concerns listed in part A, but more recently. (1/2 – 1 page)

III. Current context of your topic as a problem in 2008 (1 -1/12 pgs – any two below)

A. Economic impact topic has on society – Use statistical information to prove that your topic, as long as it remains unaddressed, costs society. Consider including here some of your primary source material: either raw statistics or quotations from an
