

Wampanoag

The Wampanoag are a group of Native Americans that lived in the areas that are now Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The Pilgrims settled near them when they first arrived in America. The Wampanoag lived in dome shaped houses called wetus. Wetus were built by bending thin tree branches into a dome shape and covering the sides with bark. The roofs were made of grass, bark, and sometimes animal skins. The Wampanoag wore clothes made from the skins of animals, such as raccoons, deer, beavers and otters. They wore shoes called moccasins that were made of moose skin. They grew vegetables such as corn and squash to eat, but they hunted and fished as well. For transportation, they used boats called canoes that were made of bark. The Wampanoag were the first Native American tribe to have a written form of their language.
