Accelerations and Circular Motion

Newton's second law, and FMA, tells us that net force and its corresponding acceleration are always in the same direction. (Only force-and acceleration are vector quantities.) But force and acceleration are not always in the direction of velocity (another vector).

1. You're in a car at a traffic light. The light turns green and the driver "rips on the gas."

- a. Your body lurches forward (not at all backward).
- b. The car accelerates forward (not at all backward).
- c. The force on the car acts forward (not at all backward).

The sketch shows the top view of the car. Note the directions of the velocity and acceleration vectors.

2. You're driving along and approach a stop sign. The driver rips on the brakes.

- a. Your body lurches backward (not at all forward).
- b. The car accelerates backward (not at all forward).
- c. The force on the car acts backward (not at all forward).

The sketch shows the top view of the car. Draw vectors for velocity and acceleration.

3. You continue driving, and round a sharp curve to the left at constant speed.

- a. Your body lurches backward (not at all forward).
- b. The direction of the car's acceleration is backward (not at all forward).
- c. The force on the car acts backward (not at all forward).

Draw vectors for velocity and acceleration of the car.

4. In general, the directions of force and acceleration, and therefore the directions of force and force, are the same (not related) opposite.

- a. The string stone's direction of motion keeps changing.
- b. If it moves faster, its direction changes faster (slower).
- c. This indicates that as speed increases, acceleration increases (decreases) (stays the same).
- d. Consider whirling the stone on a shorter string—that is, of smaller radius.
- e. For a given speed, the rate that the stone changes direction is less faster (like same).
- f. This indicates that as the radius decreases, acceleration decreases (increases) (stays the same).

Handbook of Conceptual Modeling David W. Embley, Bernhard Thalheim, 2012-04-23 Conceptual modeling is about describing the semantics of software applications at a high level of abstraction in terms of structure behavior and user interaction Embley and Thalheim start with a manifesto stating that the dream of developing information systems strictly by conceptual modeling as expressed in the phrase the model is the code is becoming reality The subsequent contributions written by leading researchers in the field support the manifesto's assertions showing not only how to abstractly model complex information systems but also how to formalize abstract specifications in ways that let developers complete programming tasks within the conceptual model itself They are grouped into sections on programming with conceptual models structure modeling process modeling user interface modeling and special challenge areas such as conceptual geometric modeling information integration and biological conceptual modeling The Handbook of Conceptual Modeling collects in a single volume many of the best conceptual modeling ideas techniques and practices as well as the challenges that drive research in the field Thus it is much more than a traditional handbook for advanced professionals as it also provides both a firm foundation for the field of conceptual modeling and points researchers and graduate students towards interesting challenges and paths for how to contribute to this fundamental field of computer science Service-Oriented Computing - ICSOC 2019 Workshops Sami Yangui, Athman Bouguettaya, Xiao Xue, Noura Faci, Walid Gaaloul, Qi Yu, Zhangbing Zhou, Nathalie Hernandez, Elisa Y. Text-based intelligent Systems Paul S. Jacobs, 2014-02-25 The symposium on which this volume was based brought together approximately fifty scientists from a variety of backgrounds to discuss the rapidly emerging set of competing technologies for exploiting a massive quantity of textual information This group was challenged to explore new ways to take advantage of the power of on line text A billion words of text can be more generally useful than a few hundred logical rules if advanced computation can extract useful information from streams of text and help find what is needed in the sea of available material While the extraction task is a hot topic for the field of natural language processing and the retrieval task is a solid aspect in the field of information retrieval these two disciplines came together at the symposium and have been cross breeding more than ever The book is organized in three parts The first group of papers describes the current set of natural language processing techniques used for interpreting and extracting information from quantities of text The second group gives some of the historical perspective methodology and current practice of information retrieval work the third covers both current and emerging applications of these techniques This collection of readings should give students and scientists alike a good idea of the current techniques as well as a general concept of how to go about developing and testing systems to handle volumes of text
