

Jefferson Davis and Abraham Lincoln: Contrasts North and South

One of the greatest ironies of the American Civil War is that both Abraham Lincoln and Jefferson Davis were both born in Kentucky. The two men who would lead Americans in the most chaotic struggle in our history were born about a hundred miles apart. History records that Lincoln was born February 12, 1809, near Hodgenville, Kentucky in present day LaRue County. Davis was born June 3, 1808, in Christian, now Todd County, Kentucky.

These two men served as wartime leaders for four bloody years. From 1861 to 1865, Lincoln and Davis oversaw the fortunes and misfortunes of their respective nations. We may well wonder how much of Kentucky these men took with them in their very different Dons.

Lincoln is still portrayed as the epitome of the simple man. Born in a log cabin of uneducated parents, he had very little formal education, yet went on to become the greatest president in the history of the United States. Davis on the other hand represents aspirations to Southern aristocracy. His family sent him to school in some of the best educational institutions in Kentucky. He attended Transylvania University in Lexington, where he learned the classics.

The contrast in Lincoln and Davis could not be more marked. Lincoln with little education had a natural genius that enabled him to overcome an economical deprived background. He studied law, and became successful in his chosen field. Although his family moved to Indiana, and then Lincoln himself moved to Springfield, Illinois, the citizens president of the United States never forgot his native state. In 1861 Lincoln married Mary Todd of Lexington, thus ensuring a continuing association with Kentucky.

The family of Jefferson Davis moved to Mississippi, where Davis became involved in cotton planting. As a plantation owner, and a former military man (he graduated from West Point in 1828), he became the ideal of a Southern gentleman. In 1846 Davis married Varina Howell of Natchez, Mississippi. His first wife had been the daughter of fellow Kentuckian, Zachary Taylor. In a strange twist of fate, Lincoln had married into the old Southern aristocracy of the Todd family of Lexington, Kentucky, while Davis had married aristocratic women of New Jersey ancestry.
