Mapping "Race" Laura E. Gómez,Nancy López,2013-08-12 Researchers commonly ask subjects to self identify their race from a menu of preestablished options Yet if race is a multidimensional multilevel social construction this has profound methodological implications for the sciences and social sciences Race must inform how we design large scale data collection and how scientists utilize race in the context of specific research questions This landmark collection argues for the recognition of those implications for research and suggests ways in which they may be integrated into future scientific endeavors It concludes on a prescriptive note providing an arsenal of multidisciplinary conceptual and methodological tools for studying race specifically within the context of health inequalities Contributors John A Garcia Arline T Geronimus Laura E G mez Joseph L Graves Jr Janet E Helms Derek Kenji Iwamoto Jonathan Kahn Jay S Kaufman Mai M Kindaichi Simon J Craddock Lee Nancy L pez Ethan H Mereish Matthew Miller

Gabriel R Sanchez Aliya Saperstein R Burciaga Valdez Vicki D Ybarra The Color Bind Erica Gabrielle Foldy, Tamara R. Buckley, 2014-02-28 Since the 1960s the dominant model for fostering diversity and inclusion in the United States has been the color blind approach which emphasizes similarity and assimilation and insists that people should be understood as individuals not as members of racial or cultural groups This approach is especially prevalent in the workplace where discussions about race and ethnicity are considered taboo Yet as widespread as color blindness has become many studies show that the practice has damaging repercussions including reinforcing the existing racial hierarchy by ignoring the significance of racism and discrimination In The Color Bind workplace experts Erica Foldy and Tamara Buckley investigate race relations in office settings looking at how both color blindness and what they call color cognizance have profound effects on the ways coworkers think and interact with each other Based on an intensive two and a half year study of employees at a child welfare agency The Color Bind shows how color cognizance the practice of recognizing the profound impact of race and ethnicity on life experiences while affirming the importance of racial diversity can help workers move beyond silence on the issue of race toward more inclusive workplace practices Drawing from existing psychological and sociological research that demonstrates the success of color cognizant approaches in dyads workgroups and organizations Foldy and Buckley analyzed the behavior of work teams within a child protection agency The behaviors of three teams in particular reveal the factors that enable color cognizance to flourish While two of the teams largely avoided explicitly discussing race one group Team North openly talked about race and ethnicity in team meetings By acknowledging these differences when discussing how to work with their clients and with each other the members of Team North were able to dig into challenges related to race and culture instead of avoiding them The key to achieving color cognizance within the group was twofold It required both the presence of at least a few members who were already color cognizant as well as an environment in which all team members felt relatively safe and behaved in ways that strengthened learning including productively resolving conflict and reflecting on their practice The Color Bind provides a useful lens for policy makers researchers and practitioners pursuing in a wide variety of goals from addressing racial disparities in health and education to creating diverse and inclusive organizations to providing culturally competent services to clients and customers By foregrounding open conversations about race and ethnicity Foldy and Buckley show that institutions can transcend the color bind in order to better acknowledge and reflect the diverse populations they serve Eliminating Disparities Through the Integration of Behavioral Health and Primary Care Services for Racial and Ethnic Minority Populations, Including Individuals with Limited English Proficiency Katherine Sanchez, 2012 This report is an examination of critical material which includes reports and articles from peer and non peer reviewed publications compiles the available evidence from practice and summarizes the knowledge base on cultural and linguistic competence in health care delivery The report served to inform a national consensus meeting to develop recommendations on the most promising approaches for engaging racial and ethnic minority populations and persons with

LEP in integrated health care to improve health outcomes and reduce health and mental health disparities Eliminating Health Disparities Panel on DHHS Collection of Race and Ethnic Data, 2004-08-11 Disparities in health and health care across racial ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds in the United States are well documented The reasons for them however are not well understood Eliminating Health Disparities Measurement and Data Needs is a comprehensive study of the collection of data by the U S Department of Health and Human services on race ethnicity and socioeconomic position It is a broad look at data collections systems both inside the department and by states and private sector entities The report identifies strengths and weaknesses in the collection of data on race ethnicity socioeconomic position as well as language and acculturation in the health and health care fields It reviews current practices in the collection of data on these measures and recommends improvements While the level of detail that each system can reasonably collect varies even a minimal amount of information on race ethnicity socioeconomic position and acculturation and language use could be enormously helpful to understanding and promoting policies to eliminate disparities BOOK JACKET Racial and Ethnic Approaches to Community Health (REACH 2010) ,2006 Racial and Ethnic Approaches to Community Health (REACH) U.S. ,2007
