Accidental Pilgrim From Mammogram To Miracle:

Accidental Pilgrim Mary Erin O'Brien, 2014-08-05 Accidental Pilgrim from Mammogram to Miracle by Mary Erin O'Brien examines faith and humor as shock absorbers to offset her jolting out of the blue diagnosis of Stage 3 breast cancer. She is like a tour guide as she invites readers along her trajectory path through cancer that she dubs her Voyage to the bottom of the C. She navigates through a myriad of foreign medical experiences like a curious explorer finding humor along the way. Investigating the inverse relationship between the physical and spiritual aspects of cancer, she notes that as her body weakened from the battery of treatments, her spirit strengthened and soared toward renewed faith. The story takes a twist when a mysterious nun, all dressed in white at a small desert chapel, conveys a prophetic message of a miracle healing. The nun emphasizes, "It will be by your faith that you are healed." All factors converge when the healing occurs and in a most unlikely setting. A well-known oncologist confirms the healing and declares it not medically explainable. This compelling yet entertaining story affirms the resilience of the human spirit when faced with tragic circumstances. It also demonstrates the transformative power of faith that can lead to healing, hope, and health.
