10 Electrical system

10.1 Introduction

The electrical system is built up of a drive motor control, where fault codes are shown with LEDs. Alternatively on new systems fault indicating can be read in texts by means of a hand terminal. The lift motor is assembled to a complete unit with the hydraulic pump.

There is a combined instrument which indicates the current battery status and measures the active time. The battery is separated from the truck through a plug, which is used when charging the battery.

There is also extra equipment such as a battery indicator with a switching function, which breaks the lifting function when the battery needs charging. An extra hour counter is available, which is concealed inside the machine.

Warning!

Pull out the battery plug and wait 3 minutes before starting work on the electrical system.
